Joe & Misses Doe

Joe & Misses Doe honors New York's Lower East Side by crossing American Comfort food with Jewish deli decadence. Joe and Jill were vets of the NYC restaurant scene before combining Joe's experience as a chef with Jill's passion behind the bar.

Joe:

A former executive chef at acclaimed New York restaurants Savoy, Viet Café, Sullivan Diner and others, Joe entered Food Network's Chopped competition series last year on a whim... and won. While Joe has a prestigious academic background as a chef and in the hospitality industry, he's never lost his simple, working class Long Island roots. He rose through the ranks of New York's hottest restaurants, but he's more comfortable in the cramped basement kitchen of his restaurant where he turns out amplified American comfort classics like Brisket Hash, BBQ chicken and some of the city's best buttermilk biscuits.

Jill:

A professional dancer who studied at Tisch and The Martha Graham Company, Jill has been mentioned in Time Out, The New York Times and others for her innovative cocktails. Her Jewish roots inspire much the restaurant menu and her tireless ambition inspires her husband Joe. Jill is the ceaseless engine of entrepreneurship that drives the restaurant. Where Joe is the strong silent type, Jill is the even stronger never silent type. Her quiet grace is what greets customers at the bar, but her bad side is something you don't want to face.
